MURDER AND THEFT.

Confessed by Criminals While Lying in Bed Asleep.

Dramatic Episodes Collected from the Police Archives of Many Countries-Sleep the Friend of the Righteous Only.

Criminologists say that the greatest terror that afflicts that fraction of humanity suffering from an uneasy conscience is not dread of the police, by any means, nor awe of any other acknowledged enemy of law-defiers.

What the criminal dreads is sleep. Sleep is, it appears, the friend of the righteous only. To men with the knowledge of dark deeds stored withn them sleep is the most treacherous of foes. The countless poems that have been written in praise of it very naturally appear as so much coldblooded mockery to such as are in hourly dread of betraying themselves under its influence.

An untold number of crimes have been confessed by their perpetrators during sleep. Is it any wonder, asks the New York World, that those conscious of irregularities of conduct prefer to remain awake?

It was not long ago that a wellknown New York detective happened to be traveling in a sleeping car. The detective, who chanced to be occupying a certain lower berth, heard the sleeper above him burst forth into a long-winded confession regarding several daring jewel robberies wherein he had taken part. Much impressed, the official kept an eye on him. Further inquiries proved that the confession had been an exact record of what had taken place.

Perhaps the entire history of crime contains no more dramatic episode than that which occurred some years ago in a Prussian township. The husband of a certain attractive young woman had vanished in a mysterious manner from his home, and all attempts to trace his whereabouts failed completely. Meantime a neighbor called Schmidt, who had been devoted to the young wife before her marriage, reappeared on the scene and paid her assiduous attentions. So successfully did he press his suit that within a year olis, Ill., on Saturday. The young of his rival's disappearance the woman man, who was about 21 years of age, consented to marry him, and they were united at the parish church.

Now comes the sequel. On the secto slumber. Presently there came a gurgling cry from the sleeping form beside her, and a moment later the man leaped from his bed and in a loud voice proclaimed that he had killed the missing husband and had buried the body in a neighboring wood. This statement the sleeper reiterated several times, naming the exact spot where the corpse lay interred.

The wife drank in the confession, and next morning carried the remarkable story to the police bureau. The place named by the sleeper was searched and, sure enough, the body of the vanished man discovered there.

Somewhat similar in several details was the case of an Austrian peasant who murdered his friend in order that he might woo the latter's sweetheart, a girl of unusual beauty. All attempts to trace the missing man had failed and doubtless the affair would have remained a mystery to the end of time had not the criminal signed his own death warrant by confessing the crime while dozing by the fire in a friend's cottage. Bit by bit he described the incidents of the terrible affair, stating that he had destroyed his victim's body by fire.

The man was then arrested and his cottage searched. Some garments and a watch belonging to the deceased being found there, his guilt was considered half proved, and when placed in the dock he made a full confession, repeating, in fact, what he had said during his slumber. The scoundrel was sentenced to death.

Corpse Placed on Exhibition,

An airtight casket, with a pane of glass just above the face, incloses the body of Louis Dorsey, who died some time ago at Deepwood, Nev. The casket is inclosed in a coffin of solid stone, on the top of which is a square cut in the form of a Bible. This square revolves and enables a spectator to view the face of the corpse, which is still startlingly lifelike.

Hint for American Shoppers. Many American tourists are in the habit of visting London stores and spending hours in the examination of goods, but seldom buy anything. As a gentle rebuke to such people a store in Oxford street has this placard prominently displayed: "Americans will please take notice that this place is not a museum. It is a shop.'

WELCOMED WITH KISSES.

Little Comedy of Errors in Which Chicago Drummer Played a Pleasing Part.

A farmer who lives some distance west of Chicago has, in addition to several hundred acres of good land a couple of extremely pretty daughters. The other day he told the girls that he had had a letter from his younger brother, Fred, whom none of the family had seen for 15 years, and that Fred was coming out to pay them a visit. He would arrive either that afternoon or the next morning Then the farmer started out to finish a job of fall plowing, leaving the girls alone in the house. Towards

"HERE'S UNCLE FRED!" noon a buggy from town drove up to the house, and a well dressed and handsome young man of 35 got out. It happened that the younger of the two girls, a pretty little child of 12 was looking out of the window as he dismounted, and she ran at once out into the yard, shouting: "Hello, Uncle Fred! I'm so glad to see you! The young man stopped, stooped down and picked up the little girl in his arms. She put her arms around his neck and kissed him. Then, still carrying her, he walked up to the front door. There the elder sister, a blooming maiden of 18, was waiting "Ellen," said the small child, "here's Uncle Fred. Now you must kiss him. Greatly blushing the elder sister put up her lips to be kissed, and then the three sat down in the parlor together. When the head of the family got back from the fields the caller rose, handed him a card which set forth that he was the traveling representative of a Chicago agricultural implement house, and asked if there was anything in his line needed.

When Uncle Fred really arrived the next day neither of the two girls, says the Chicago Tribune, would go near him until he had been positively ideatified by their father.

form of his companion and tearing at his mangled and bleeding flesh, a large portion of which had already been eaten. When the animal saw him it immediately sprang at him and a desperate fight followed. By the use of a large bunting knife h fought until the panther, badly wounded, turned into the woods. He managed to call the assistance of several farmers and the mangled remains of the dead man were taken into Glendale. The animal is thought to be the same one which has been seen recently near Metropolis, and which has destroyed numerous dogs, hogs and cattle.

Lightning Plays Queer Pranks. During a thunderstorm at Hazleton Pa., lightning struck a Hungarian boarding house, passed between two boarders who occupied the same bed and threw them in opposite corners of the room without serious injury. A cradle containing a baby was crushed to splinters, but the child escaped unhurt.
